Under the Hailey plan of distribution of the one cent gas tax for feeder roads Appomattox will gain $1,712.29, which will give her a road fund derived from the gas tax of $5,754.60.

The political situation is quiet in Appomattox. The Republicans have a lease on national affairs it seems, world without end, state politics are absolutely dominated by office holders, and the people are indifferent.

The Hon John Rolf Horsely has a new lease on public life—the governor has re-appointed him chairman of theState Water Power Commission. Now the legging will begin for increased appropriations of the people's money to carry on further junketing parties.

The Appomattox Park

The House yesterday passed Senator Swanson's bill to provide for inspection of the battlefields in and around old Appomattox Courthouse, and the bill now goes to the President for signature, when it will become law.

The Senate passed the bill on January 16. Under its terms, the Secretary of War was empowered to appoint a commission of three to make an inspection of the historic battlefields and surrender grounds and report to Congress on the feasibility of marketing and preserving them. The commission is required to make its report before December 1, 1926. The bill authorizes an appropriation of $3,000 to meet the expenses of the proposed inspection.

According to Senator Swanson's bill, the commission will be composed of an officer of the army engineers corps, a union and a Confederate veteran, and the latter two are to be persons familiar with the battlefields and the events which happened there.

The scenes of the engagements in this locality are slowly being obliterated and, if their position is to be permanently established plans should be promptly commenced to accomplish it, says the report of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs. The area is now marked to some extent by temporary markers, which are in poor condition and should be replaced.

The State of Virginia is completing a Class A Highway from Richmond to Lynchburg, which runs within two miles of the battlefields.

Offer College Courses to Japanese Students

Philadelphia.—Under plans launched by the American Friends service committee a selected group of Japanese students will be invited to come to the United States next autumn to study in colleges and universities as the guests of Americans.

The Friends service committee said that a nation-wide appeal would be made for co-operation in carrying out their plans. A number of colleges already have volunteered.

"This is the first concrete proposal," said a statement, "to give general expression to the widespread desire, . . . to improve our relations with the people of Japan.

"A Friends service committee, composed of Japanese Quakers, has been formed in Tokyo. This committee will be charged with the selection of the students. The choice will be based entirely on individual fitness and aims and the students will not represent any official or other special interests.

"On their arrival in this country they will be placed in volunteer colleges. This will insure the full benefit of the plan to Americans as well as to the Japanese."

FIND FOOTPRINTS 25 MILLION YEARS OLD

Marks Made by Animals Long Since Extinct.

Washington.—Footprints made in the sand approximately twenty-five million years ago by animals long since extinct have been discovered in the Grand canyon of the Colorado river. They have been preserved indelibly in the record of the rocks, in this instance the Coconino sandstone of Arizona.

Dr. Charles W. Gilmore, the paleontologist who uncovered many of these ancient tracks, has brought specimens of them to Washington. He describes the unique exhibit for the first time in a bulletin of the Smithsonian Institution.

Hard to Grasp.

The human mind, according to Doctor Gilmore, can scarcely grasp the idea of the vast age of animal life on the earth that is presented by these strange footprints. Some tracks of extinct quadrupeds were first discovered in the Grand canyon in 1915 by Prof. Charles Schuchert. In 1924 Dr. John C. Merriam, president of the Carnegie Institution of Washington conceived the idea of having a permanent exhibit of the footprints in place, just as they were found, so that the tourist that visits the Grand canyon may see them.

Such an exhibit has been prepared on the Hermit trail by Doctor Gilmore, in addition to the specimens brought to Washington. The tracks include those of new and unknown species that lived in the wet sand of this region when the earth was much younger. The Smithsonian Institution hopes later to do similar work in other localities and to take steps to preserve such natural phenomena.

"The great antiquity of these footprints, which occur from 900 to 1,080 feet below the level of the present rim of the canyon," says Doctor Gilmore, "is clearly demonstrated at this locality.

Beyond Comprehension.

It is obvious that since the day when those animals impressed their feet in what at that time was moist sand, more than 1,000 feet of rock-making materials were piled up in successive strata above them, and this does not take into account many hundreds of feet more that have been eroded off from the present top of the canyon wall.

"The great length of time required for the cutting away or erosion of the rock to form the deep canyon, and the even longer time necessary for the original deposition of this great mass of stone is, when translated into terms of years, if that were possible, so stupendous as to be almost beyond human comprehension.

"It is hoped that the object lesson so graphically taught by this unique exhibit may serve as an example to stimulate the preparation and preservation of other exhibits of interest to be found in our government controlled parks, monuments and reservations."

REOPEN TUNNEL USED BY GRANT'S TROOPS

Shaft to Be Memorial to "Battle of the Crater."

Petersburg, Va.—One of the greatest pieces of battlefield engineering of the Civil war has been brought to light with the reopening of the main tunnel by which the famous mine under the Confederate works near Petersburg was placed. Explosion of the mine caused the "Battle of the Crater" to go down in history as the most tragic of that war.

Much of its timber still sound, the tunnel is declared to be a model of shoring. It is planned to make of it a shrine to American ingenuity and resourcefulness.

Winding its narrow way 30 feet underground, the tunnel extends a distance of 510 feet from behind what was General Grant's front line to the crater itself. Several parallel and perpendicular shorter tunnels connect with it. Finally the passageway enters a large underground room, believed to have been a Confederate bomb-proof dugout.

Dug in Thirty Days.

It was this gallery, as it was called by the Pennsylvania miners of Colonel Pleasant's regiment who dug it in 30 days, that afforded the means of laying the mines which were intended to clear the obstruction to Grant's march on Richmond. In the success of Colonel Pleasant's plan, which at first Grant described as "claptrap and nonsense," the North had placed its faith for an immediate ending of the war.

Federal troops had been drilled for a month and Grant had concentrated 65,000 troops in the adjacent valley for the charge that was to follow the explosion at 3:30 a. m. of July 30, 1864, which wrecked Elliott's salient and cleared the way to the capital of the Confederacy.

Many sections of the passageway have now been found to be in place just as originally built. Here and there were discovered evidences of the men of the Forty-eighth Pennsylvania infantry who dug them. Whether the parallel galleries were dug by the men under General Lee in an effort to locate the Federals working underground or by the same men who dug their way 510 feet to the crater, remains undetermined.

300 Were Killed.

Through Colonel Pleasant's tunnel 4,000 pounds of explosives were placed under the Confederate works. While Grant's army waited the fuse was lit. After an hour's wait it was found necessary to enter the tunnel and relight it half way up. A few minutes later came the explosion which sent 300 Confederates to death, caused confusion and delay to the waiting Federal troops, and paved the way for the rush of General Meade's men to their destruction.

A crossfire from Confederate batteries, placed advantageously after it had been discovered that their position was being undermined, met the Federals as they charged through the opening made by the explosion. It was two hours before Meade penetrated the thin gray line.

By that time Mahone had come up with his Petersburg brigade, and the celebrated "Crater Charge" drove the enemy beyond the crater, leaving behind more than 5,000 Union dead. The hope of General Grant for the immediate capture of Richmond was wrecked.

Plans to Blow Coal From Mines to Mills

Pittsburg, Kan.—Coal underlied at the mines here and blown to Kansas City through pipe lines for fuel for steel mills and other industrial purposes, is the prediction made by Ira Clemens, one of the leading coal operators of this field.

Clemens estimates that from the acclaimed coal lands in this district there is sufficient to produce 400,000 tons annually, which will last for more than half a century. He also has visions of gas plants built to manufacture gas from the coal and by a redistilling process make gasoline from it. Coal hauled by trucks from here to the nearby large cities will be seen in a few years, he states, and predicts a bright future for the Kansas coal industry, which this winter is enjoying unusual prosperity.

Radio Heat for Homes Next Step for Science

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The broadcasting of heat by radio is only a matter of years, in the opinion of Prof. S. E. Tibbals of Carnegie Institute of Technology, who, it became known, is making a study of the problem.

Mr. Tibbals, president of the Ausen ean Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, and holder of the Ahgens professorship in plumbing, heating and ventilating believes "it is no more improbable to broadcast heat waves than it was to broadcast sound waves."

Sending heat to consumers via the air is now the problem of research men and laboratory workers, who must "discover instruments to control heat waves, especially a detector which will pick them up and hold and amplify them," says Professor Tibbals.

Transmission of heat by atmospheric conductivity is essential because of the gradual exhaustion of the elements of fuel, said the professor, adding, "The day is not far off, in my opinion, when we will see huge centralized heating plants broadcasting heat to homes, industries and office buildings."

INDIGESTION

Black-Draught Brings Relief for Tight, Bloated Feeling.

"I had indigestion," says Mr. W. B. Bostnight, of Ballentine, S. C. "Working out, I got in the habit of eating fast, for which I soon paid by having a tight, bloated feeling after meals. This made me very uncomfortable.

"I would feel stupid and drowsy, didn't feel like working. I was told it was indigestion. Some one recommended Black-Draught and I took it after meals. I soon could eat anything any time.

"I use it for colds and billousness and it will knock out a cold and carry away the bile better and quicker than any liver medicine I have ever found."

Taking too fast, too much, or faulty chewing of your food, often causes discomfort after meals. A pinch of Black-Draught, washed down with a swallow of water, will help to bring prompt relief.

Black-Draught gently helps the over-taxed organs to perform their regular functions, in such cases, aiding the system of poisons that might accumulate. Sold everywhere. 25c. C-36
